

Entry is free for the £500 Hippocrates Young Poets' Prize for Poetry and Medicine

The Hippocrates Young Poets' Prize is a £500 award for an unpublished poem of up to 50 lines in English on any medical theme.

The Prize, founded 2013, is for young poets aged 14 to 18 from anywhere in the world [past winners have come from the UK, Ireland, USA and Hong Kong].

The Hippocrates Press will publish winning and short-listed entries in the 2020 Hippocrates Prize Anthology.

Entries are free: deadline 1st March 2020

The 2020 Hippocrates Young Poets' Prize will be judged by poet Lawrence Sail who said: "Entering the Hippocrates Young Poets' Prize is an opportunity to bring the honesty and inventiveness of youth to bear on the world of medicine and health, one of the most central areas of human experience."

Winners of the Prize will be announced at the 2020 Hippocrates Awards Ceremony, to be held in Oviedo in Northwest Spain.

The Hippocrates Poetry and Medicine Initiative, winner of the Times Higher Education Award for Innovation and Excellence in the Arts, investigates links between medicine, the arts and health.

Healthy heart charity the Cardiovascular Research Trust, the Prize patron, aims to help us all to avoid heart disease.
